

Protect Your Children

All parents should give serious thought to their estate plans.
In life, we hope for and expect the best for ourselves and our children.

However, in estate planning, we must plan for the worst.
With a few simple steps you can protect and provide for your children in the event you are gone.

All Parents Need at Least Three Basic Documents

- ✓ A Will (nominating a guardian for minor children)
- ✓ A Financial Power of Attorney
- ✓ A Medical Power of Attorney

Some Families Need More

- ✓ Are you planning for a special-needs child?
- ✓ Are your parents planning for a special-needs grandchild?
- ✓ Are you or a parent a Veteran, entitled to benefits to help pay for care?
- ✓ Are you caring for a parent who may need a nursing home?
- ✓ Would you like to avoid the cost and delay of Probate in the event of disability or death?

If you have no plan, are you comfortable with the courts and the legislature protecting your children? Your estate planning documents will speak for you when you cannot speak for yourself in the event of your incapacity or death.

- If you have no plan, it's time to get busy!
- If you do have a plan, is it up to date with ever-changing laws?

Times change.

Values endure.

Protect what is important in your life: your family, your money, your privacy.

Knowledge is power.

The more you know, the better you will do in protecting your children.
